Truth, justice and reparations for Iraq*

March 20, 2003 marks a dark day in the history of the 21st century. On this day, the U.S. and Britain, supported by a group of almost fifty countries called the “coalition of the willing” led an illegal war on the independent UN member state of Iraq, resulting in a devastating occupation<sup>1</sup>. The heritage of thousands of years has been destroyed and an ancient, deeply rooted culture thrown into chaos. Ten years have passed, but the Iraqi people are still waiting for justice and accountability.

The suffering inflicted on the Iraqi people is still widely ignored by the international community and it is questionable if the full extent of the damage will ever be recognized. It is estimated that over one million people have been killed during the years of the war and occupation, up to 5 million have been displaced, 4-5 million children have lost a parent, between one and two million women have become widows<sup>2</sup>, 23 percent of Iraq's estimated 30 million people live under the poverty line and 600.000 orphans live in the streets. If there is any people in this world that deserve the right to truth, justice and reparations and guarantee of non-recurrence, it's the Iraqi people.

Among the worrying figures is the number of missing people as a result of the war. According to different sources the estimations range from 250.000 up to one million<sup>3</sup>, among them over 90.000 children of displaced families<sup>4</sup>.

The right to truth

The right to truth is often invoked in the context of gross human rights violations and has taken an increasing importance in recent decades. It finds its roots in international humanitarian law, in particular in regard to the right of families to know the fate of their

<sup>1</sup> The war was repeatedly declared to be an illegal war in contravention of article 2, paragraph 4, of the UN Charter, see: Iraq war illegal, says Annan <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/3661134.stm>

<sup>3</sup> A report issued by the International Red Cross during year 2009, noted that the number of missing in Iraq has reached one million people

<sup>4</sup> In 2009 about 20% of internally displaced and 5% of refugee returnee reported children to be missing. Many communities reported missing family members (30% of IDPs, 30% of IDP returnees, 27% of refugee returnees) indicating that they were missing because of kidnappings, abductions and detentions and that they do not know what happened to their missing family members. <http://www.uniraq.org/documents/UNHCR%20Iraq%20Protection%20Monitoring%20Jan-Oct%202009.pdf>

relatives.<sup>5</sup> However, it is equally linked with other rights<sup>6</sup>, such as the right to legal and judicial protection, the right to an effective investigation and the right to obtain reparation.<sup>7</sup>

Since 2003 the people of Iraq live in a failed state, rife with corruption and brutality. The education system has broken down and illiteracy is on the rise. Thousands of children have died due to poor health services and a worrying increase of birth defects in certain areas has to be noted. Security is non-existent. Thousands of Iraqi families are still searching for their relatives but neither the United States nor Iraqi authorities did ever help families to search for them. Many have been killed or languish in one of the many secret prisons established under occupation that continue to exist until this day<sup>8</sup>. Security forces target civilians in mass campaigns of arbitrary arrests, torture and abuse in prisons is widespread and mass executions occur on a regular scale.

Recognition is precondition and consequence of justice.<sup>9</sup> One of the first demands of victims<sup>10</sup> therefore is to obtain recognition of the fact that they have been harmed. Impunity however remains the dominant feature for Iraq. The international community has frequently condemned the invasion but until 2013 the responsible as well as the perpetrators of crimes have been granted immunity. Inside Iraq the Iraqi government bears the primary responsibility for such immunity but never took appropriate legal action<sup>11</sup>, granted impunity to offenders and continued to violate human rights. Society has the right to truth about past events concerning the perpetration of heinous crimes, as well as the circumstances and the reasons for which aberrant crimes came to be committed, so that such events do not reoccur in the future.<sup>12</sup>

<sup>5</sup> Compare: Article 32 of the additional protocol of the Geneva Conventions, 12 August 1949, relating to the Protection of Victims of International Armed Conflicts: In the implementation of this Section, the activities of the High Contracting Parties, of the Parties to the conflict and of the international humanitarian organizations mentioned in the Conventions and in this Protocol shall be prompted mainly by the right of families to know the fate of their relatives. <http://www.icrc.org/ihl/INTRO/470>

<sup>6</sup> Although this right was initially referred to solely within the context of enforced disappearances, it has been gradually extended to other serious human rights violations such as extrajudicial executions and torture. ### The right to reparations

All victims of violations of human rights are thus entitled to reparation<sup>13</sup>. The people of Iraq are entitled to a measure of satisfaction in the form of an official apology from all the States that participated in the invasion and occupation, as well as compensation for the material and moral injury. This obligation is a general principle of law as referred to in article 38, paragraph 1c of the Statute of the International Court of Justice<sup>14</sup>. Such compensation will include:

- Rebuilding the Iraqi infrastructure, government institutions, schools and private property that were bombed or damaged during war and under occupation
- An environmental clean-up, undertaken and financed by the coalition of the willing, that is responsible for the use of depleted uranium and other toxic agents that are susceptible to the worrying increase of cancer and birth defects
- Restore the Iraqi health system to pre-invasion levels, which used to be the best in the region but even after ten years of alleged reconstruction still fails to meet minimum standards.
- Protect internally and externally displaced persons. The coalition of the willing should offer financial and political support to refugees
- Locate missing and disappeared persons. Even ten years after the invasion kidnappings, abductions and detentions continue to occur. Many of the disappeared are languishing in prisons or have been executed. These cases must be disclosed.
- End human rights violations including torture, arbitrary arrests, forced disappearances, trafficking of persons, moral and physical harm and the use of illegal weapons.
- Appoint a UN Special Rapporteur for Iraq. Human rights abuses inflicted on the Iraqi people are still present in the country and must be monitored.
- Uncover and prosecute violations committed during the war and invasion
- All countries, including the US should ratify the statute of the International Criminal Court and serious cases be referred to the Court for investigation and prosecution.
- A United Nations Compensation Commission for the Iraqi victims should be established, or at least a special fund that could be administered by the OHCHR.

Finally, we call on the UN in general and the Human Rights Council in particular to:

- Ensure that all human rights violations in Iraq during the sanction and the invasion and occupation be investigated by an international independent body.
- Appoint a UN Special Rapporteur for the Human Rights situation in Iraq.
- Request the Special Rapporteur on the promotion of truth, to request a country visit to Iraq and include the topic in his reports.

<sup>13</sup> Recognition is only a first step which further leads to reparations. Reparations provide the material form of the recognition owed to an equal rights holder whose fundamental rights have been violated .Compare report A/HRC/21/46 of the Special Rapporteur on the promotion of truth, reparation and guarantee of non-recurrence, Pablo de Greiff, article 30, http://www.ohchr.org/Documents/HRBodies/HRCouncil/RegularSession/Session21/A-HRC-21-46\_en.pdf
